A July downpour couldn't stop Williamsburgians from crowding around the barbecue from the Lower East Side's Pig and Khao, which ventured across the East River and to the back patio of Good Company (10 Hope Street) on Tuesday night, July 15 in Brooklyn. Pig and Khao's chef and owner Leah Cohen was on hand to help serve the $10 plates, while Ducky provided the music for umbrella-holding eaters. Dubbed the "BBQ Blowout," the event was presented by Finger on the Pulse. Photos by Emily Tan for the Village Voice.
